JSS ORANGERIES

What is an Orangery?

Dating back to the 17th Century, an Orangery was a brick and glass building situated in the grounds of a residence, often associated with wealth. Similar to a greenhouse or conservatory, the Orangery provided a luxurious extension of the residence' plants, protecting the more exotic varieties from the harsh winter frosts, including citrus trees - hence the name Orangery.

Modern day Orangeries are an elegant and luxurious extension of your living space. The structure of an Orangery is more substantial to that of a conservatory, having more brick work which incorporates a large lantern roof.

Extend your living space

This light and airy extension will flood light into your home with a stunning lantern style glass roof, making your new living space very versatile. Whether you're looking to extend your kitchen or dining room, create a home office or study or maybe even a playroom, an Orangery is a beautiful addition to your home.

What our customers say...

"A big thank you to JSS Installations Ltd for work carried out with a conservatory. Right from commencement of the base and brickwork we felt very assured. Wayne worked conscientiously, clean and tidy, a very good job done all round. Followed by John and Dean who did all the installations and during some heavy downpour's managed a job well done. Not forgetting Tony the electrician and Gary the plasterer for the work carried out by them promptly. To sum up, a well organised operation from start to finish with a polite team. We hope no problems occur but feel confident that should any arise that they will be dealt with in the same manner."

Mr & Mrs Martin
